DEATH OF FLOYD HENRY CRANE.

End Came at Bretton Hall, New York City, Wednesday Noon From Heart Trouble and Complications.

At 12.30 o'clock Wednesday noon, the death of Floyd H. Crane occurred at his home, Bretton Hall, in New York city, after an illness of several months. The end was not unexpected, because of his serious condition, but will come as a surprise to his many friends in this city who may not have known of his illness. Death resulted from heart trouble, with other complications. A little over a year ago he had his first attack, which was apparently overcome, and he regained his usual health. Last February, however, he had a recurrence of the attack, which was more severe, and resulted in his death, he having gradually failed until the end. He was in this city, however, ten days ago, having spent Easter with relatives here. Floyd Henry Crane was born in Barre, Orleans county, New York, November 16, 1851, the son of Stephen and Mary E. (Starr) Crane and received his education in the district schools of that place. The family came here in 1868 and the deceased read law in the office of the late George Pratt. He later entered Albany law school, from which he graduated and took up the practice of law in New York city in which he was engaged for several years before taking up his active career in the railroad service.

In 1878 he became ticket agent of the Elevated railway in New York city, at which he continued for three years, when he joined the engineers' corps of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, of which he was chief clerk of the Long Island railroad. He had been there but a year when he was made assistant superintendent and then superintendent of the Woodruff Sleeping Car company, at Chicago, where he remained until 1889, when the Pullman Palace Car company sought his services and for three years Mr. Crane was assistant super. of that company, at Kansas City and Chicago. It was in 1892 that the New Haven road recognized Mr. Crane's executive ability and made him superintendent of the parlor, dining and sleeping car service of the company, which position he held until his death. In this position Mr. Crane was recognized as one of the leading railroad men of the country and was widely known in railroad circles because of the excellent basis on which he had placed that service. Mr. Crane was president of the Charles F. Noyes company of New York city from the time of its incorporation in 1905 to January 1, 1911, when he became vice president of the company. He was secretary and treasurer of the White Realty company of New York, secretary and treasurer of No. 412 Broadway company of New York, and a director in these companies, as well as in the Danbury & Portchester Railroad Co. In September, 1898, in connection with Charles D. Noyes and William H. Oat, he purchased The Norwich Bulletin and was a director of the company at the time of his death. He was president and a director of the Crane Realty company, which owns the building which The Bulletin occupies.

Mr. Crane was a republican in politics, was a 32d degree Mason, and belonged to the Shrine in New York city, his Masonic connections being in the metropolis. He was a descendant of the earliest settlers of Orleans county, of New York state, his grandfather, Jerry Crane, being among the first to locate there. Mr. Crane's mother died many years ago, and his father passed away here in 1904, having been a well-known nurseryman in this city.

In the death of Mr. Crane, the New Haven road loses a most capable department superintendent, his long railroad career having properly fitted him for the duties connected therewith. At the time of his death he was the oldest general officer in the employ of the New Haven road. He was a shrewd business man of the strictest integrity. He hated a sham, being a man of uprightness and strong convictions. His career stands as the result of his persistent personal effort. He was a loyal friend and a devoted son, husband and father.

He married in Chicago, in October, 1885, Emily E. Partridge, by whom he is survived, together with one son, Lester Stephen Crane, who was born in 1888. He is also survived by his stepmother, Mrs. Stephen Crane of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles D. Noyes of this city and Mrs. George W. Whaley of Easton, Pa.

The body will lie in state in Bretton Hall today and be brought here Friday, arriving in a special car on the two o'clock train, with services following.

THREE MORE CASES IN SUPREME COURT

Police Are Stunned by Strikers and Three Are Struck—Necessary to Fire Revolver to Keep Crowd at Bay.

One of the worst experiences the local police have had in quelling strike disturbances was that of Wednesday, when the striking Polish weavers at the Falls mill broke loose with a storm of rocks and bricks and bombarded the bluecoats, who had been sent there to put down the disturbance.

The weaving department was closed on Tuesday because of part of the number being out on strike, which was caused, it is said, by an attempt to grade the work. On Tuesday night a window in the mill was broken and a lively time for a while. This was the beginning of what was to come. There were employees at work in the cloth room, where the clothes from the Shetucket and Falls mills are finished. When the mill was opened at 12.30, the strikers were already in the mill, and the police were called to the scene.

The action of the police in keeping them from the grounds was not to their liking and a number began throwing whatever they could get their hands on and a rain of missiles was coming their way. In the front ranks were women with children in their arms.

The shower of stones became so great that it was necessary to call in Policeman Driscoll to draw his revolver and empty it, he having been struck in the leg with a large stone which knocked him to the ground. A crowd, dropped back some, then, but was still ugly. The walk in front of the mill property was literally covered with stones which had struck the fence and fell to the walk. Policemen Brock had his hand cut and his lip cut in a scuffle with a woman, while Policeman Keenan received a hard blow in the arm from a stone. Both the other policemen had their hands cut by the crowd.

Being informed that a number of police were being sent to their assistance in putting down the disturbance, the policemen did not attempt to make any arrests, as soon as the crowd learned that help was coming, some of the leaders began to get away and it was then that Policemen Henderson and Driscoll secured the crowd and those who had taken a prominent part, and there was another fusillade. Drawn revolvers alone kept the crowd back while they were taking them to the ravine. Fortunately there was a team passing, which, upon being ordered to stop, took the prisoners to headquarters.

A crowd of the strikers and sympathizers then hurried down Kanawha street to Washington, hoping to intercept the police with the two men, but they did not figure on the team, but had they overtaken the police it is the opinion of the officers that they would have lost their prisoners, do whatever they would.

The prisoners returned in an auto bus with six policemen under charge of Captain Linton, by whose direction they acted in making an arrest, reaching the mill, those prominent in the stone throwing being secured. Six prisoners were taken to the jail, and were soon at headquarters, and a return visit made, but they had quieted down then and others who were wanted had disappeared. In the evening the prisoners were taken to the jail.

It is a remarkable remedy. Thousands who were destined for hospitals have saved themselves by the timely use of this remedy. It is astonishing how pain disappears, how swollen protrusions vanish, how internal swellings are reduced, how bleeding and itching stop instantly. One of the most important things in life is to know just what to do in an emergency. And in place of this, this will tell the story.
